FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

FIGHTING BLIGHT COAST TO COAST: SECUREVIEW DISTRIBUTION NETWORK IS NATIONWIDE

Market Demand and Company Growth Add Multiple U.S. Locations

SecureView, maker of the country's first virtually unbreakable, undetectable board up system, is announcing the expansion of its distribution network. With a total of 53 locations, SecureView is now protecting properties nationwide.

The new locations represent a year of significant growth for SecureView. In 2014, the company announced the addition of 42 new distribution locations.

"SecureView is changing how abandoned and vacant buildings are secured and protected," said Robert Klein, chairman and co-founder, SecureView. "The addition of our new locations makes SecureView products more broadly available, improves neighborhoods and helps America eliminate plywood one board at a time."

SecureView manufactures window and door systems to secure vacant and abandoned properties, protecting and preserving the value of those assets. The company's products are an effective solution to alleviating neighborhood blight. Designed to look like traditional windows, SecureView products provide natural light and a clear view into properties, improving the safety and marketability of properties and their neighborhoods.

In addition to improving curb appeal, SecureView windows and doors are virtually unbreakable and completely customizable. SecureView products protect properties and reduce crime and squatting associated with plywood and steel board ups. SecureView can be modified by the customer onsite to fit any window, and is quickly and easily installed using a simple and effective compression bolt system.

"Protecting and preserving property values is our priority. The addition of our new locations significantly strengthens our nationwide distribution network and extends our reach," said Klein.

With manufacturing headquarters in Indiana and flagship offices in Chicago and Cleveland, SecureView products are available at 53 locations nationwide.
